CSIA Announces Award Winners

May 16, 2011, MADISON, Wis. – The Control System Integrators Association (CSIA) announced winners of four awards at its 2011 Executive Conference in Orlando.

Jack Barber and Joan and Norm O’Leary shared the Distinguished Service Award. Barber is Alliance Partner member at National Instruments, based in Austin, Texas. Joan and Norm O’Leary, the former executive director of the Control System Integrators Association, were both major contributors to the growth and success of the association. Joan and Norm are retired and live in Malvern, Pa.

Dean Streck, chief executive officer of V I Engineering, Farmington Hills, Mich., was awarded the Charlie Bergman Award. The award is named for CSIA founder Charlie Bergman and recognizes an individual member for outstanding and length of service to the organization through leadership, education, mentoring and advancement of CSIA’s goals. Among his many accomplishments, Dean completed a major upgrade to the CSIA Best Practices manual and championed a move to collate CSIA web assets and strategy into what has become the CSIA Connected Community web site.

Jamie Diehl, vice president of finance and human resources at Concept Systems, Inc., Albany, Ore., was named CSIA Rising Star, an award that recognizes young professionals who have demonstrated a commitment to the profession and exhibited leadership potential. Jamie was a major contributor to the CSIA Insurance Committee activities during a critical growth period and continues to provide ongoing guidance to the association.

Anixter, received the Partner of the Year Award. The award recognizes a company that has significantly contributed to the betterment of CSIA and its members and promoted CSIA certification. Anixter’s involvement on the Partner Committee and its financial support to the association has been exemplary.

The awards were presented Friday, April 29, at a banquet honoring the award winners.
